When George Washington Carver was a boy, he loved to learn about plants. He learned a lot about them! People would even ask him for help when their plants were sick. So he became known as the "plant doctor."

George grew up to become a scientist. He studied plants and farming. He came up with new ways to use plants. For example, he made paper and milk using peanuts! So people gave him a new nickname. They called him "The Peanut Man."

George cared about helping people. He taught poor farmers how they could grow more plants. He taught them how they could make more money.
